Crystal Gem Creations Review

From Cra-Z-Art

Editor's Rating

Age Recommendation 8+

Editor's Review

These flowers will bloom forever. That's because they're Crystal Gem Creations, construction kits that let kids ages 8 and up build gem-like floral creations. There are three sets to collect: Blooming Lotus, Blossoming Bonsai, and Jewel Succulents. Each kit includes gem-like pieces that snap together, plus decorative stickers. Blooming Lotus is the smallest set with 75 pieces. You're building a 3-D lotus flower that stands on its own. Jewel Succulents comes with 175 pieces and features two types of cacti and four species of succulents all with colorful pots. And Blossoming Bonsai includes 240 pieces for building a 3-D bonsai tree with two crystal kittens on a sparkling crystal platform.

Should I get it?

These 3-D floral kits will be fun for crafty kids and adults to build. They are pretty easy to build and most of the flower petals are flexible so that kids can rearrange them to look like they're in full bloom or more closed up. The addition of the stickers adds even more shine and customization to these arrangements.

Pros

- 3 kits to collect
- Building is easy
- Customize with stickers
- They look pretty on display

Snoopy Sno-Cone Machine

VIEW ALL

In the shape of a doghouse, the Snoopy Sno-Cone Machine was an ode to America's most precocious pet dog. A basic slushie creator in almost every sense, it dutifully ground hunks of ice for as long as your arms were willing to work the crank. (No batteries or electricity with this toy.) Hard work was rewarded with a snowlike mixture that was then mixed with fruit juice (or anything else you were brave enough to add) and served in cups for eager customers.

Read "A Brief History of Peanuts."

Recognized by TIME magazine as one of the 100 best toys in history, the Snoopy Sno-Cone Machine holds a notable place in the annals of children's play.

Background
The name "Tyrannosaurus Rex" comes from Greek and Latin words meaning "tyrant lizard king." The "king" ruled over what's now North America and Asia during the Cretaceous period. They could grow to be 40 feet long, and 12 to 15 feet tall. It's believed to have been both an active predator and a scavenger. The most large carnivorous meat-eater. The Tyrannosaurus Rex was most likely a prey predator given that it was the largest carnivore in its environment, and it had an extremely strong sense of smell, comparable to a modern-day cat.

The Body
The Tyrannosaurus Rex was a four-legged (Saurischian) dinosaur, and moved in a horizontal position, parallel to the ground, using their tail as a counterbalance for their massive head. If they had stood upright, the Tyrannosaurus Rex would be over 25 feet tall. Despite their powerful development, the Tyrannosaurus Rex only moved about 12 miles per hour. They had ten neck vertebrae, seven back vertebrae, and five sacral vertebrae. The number of tail vertebrae is unknown and could well have varied between individuals but probably numbered at least forty. In comparison to the leg and other predatory dinosaurs, the forearms of the Tyrannosaurus Rex were quite small, and the function of these limbs is a source of debate among paleontologists. Some believe the dinosaur's arms were an evolutionary remnant that the species lost of a modern-day bear. Others argue that the Tyrannosaurus Rex's arms were adapted for "scent tracking" of their quarters, given their ability to inflict deep wounds with four-inch claws.

The Head
The largest known Tyrannosaurus Rex skull is 5 feet in length. The shape of the skull is unique amongst dinosaurs in that it is extremely wide at the rear but tapers to a point at the front. The Tyrannosaurus Rex's skull was made of bone that was fused together. The end of the upper jaw is U-shaped, which increases the amount of bone and hence a Tyrannosaurus Rex could eat with one bite. The Tyrannosaurus Rex had the most powerful bite of any land animal that has ever lived, and the jaw strength to crush through bone. They had 60 teeth, and the teeth that varied in shape to rip flesh, shove it into the air, and swallow it whole. The front teeth were closely packed and sharper than the rest to grip and pull meat. Its side teeth were more widely spaced and made for tearing flesh. Teeth turned backwards in a D-shape to help prevent them from breaking apart.

Triceratops
The Tyrannosaurus Rex was always making new teeth, so whether or not they pulled off whole heads, old teeth were constantly being replaced with new ones. This great animal also had warts in its head, similar to a modern-day alligator, to help keep their brains cool, and keep itself for overheating while crawling over with flies.

Background
Triceratops came from the New Horns on the most common of the western North American. The Triceratops were tough gladiators that fed long, and weighed the Triceratops was the most intriguing they lived in three when a parent was there when a parent was there, but have been for
